Government Will Determine Reason for Increase in the Prices of Foodstuffs

SWEEPING INQUIRY BEGUN

Despite Warning, Chicago
Starts Inquiry

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—President Wilson set the machinery of the federal government in motion today to determine whether the cost of living is being increased "upon the pretext of the conditions existing in Europe." He called upon Attorney General McReynolds to report if criminal prosecutions were warranted. And if any law was necessary, the president may send a special message to Congress in the latter event.

"Certainly the country ought to be defended," the president wrote, "the attorney general, if possible, against men who would take advantage of such circumstances to increase the price of food and the difficulties of living."

Sweeping Probe Begins

Attorney General McReynolds at once set to work the bureau of investigation of the department of justice with hundreds of agents throughout the country.

Agents of the department of justice also were started on the inquiry and Secretary Redfield conferred with Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture.

The attorney general also telegraphed to the United States district attorneys at Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Seattle, Portland, Ore., Detroit, Kansas City, Mo., Omaha, Louisville, Galveston, St. Paul, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Dallas, Atlanta, Norfolk and New Orleans, instructing them to get information and suggest steps to be taken regarding marked increases in foodstuff prices. At the same time instructions were issued to every district attorney in the country.

The district attorney in the east replied by wire tonight that there was no good reason for advancing since the war that the increase in the prices were all artificial and that the urged investigation and prohibition.

Congressmen who already have introduced resolutions to institute the action of the administration with satisfaction. They pointed out while their particular has taken a great jump in price, wheat exports practically are paralyzed and millions of bushels are piled up in elevators or in freight cars strung across the continent.

COST OF EUROPEAN WAR AS AFFECTING U. S. $100,000,000

Internal Revenue Tax to Be Levied on Tobaccos
and Liquors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Congressional leaders today planned quick action to increase the internal revenue by $100,000,000 to offset curtailment of customs revenue expected during the European war. Senate Finance Committee, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative Underwood, chairman of the house ways and means committee, began a conference with Secretary McAdoo, which will continue tomorrow. Later the situation will be laid before the president. It was definitely agreed to confine the activities to the internal revenue taxes, instead of attempting to change in any way the customs duties. An extra tax on liquors, possibly including doubling the $1 a barrel now assessed upon beer, is the first plan to be discussed. There was talk today not only of increased tax on liquors, but on tobacco, proprietary medicines and other articles.

Both Senator Simmons and Representative Underwood expressed gratification over the present sound condition of the treasury. "There is no treasury deficit," said Senator Simmons later. "But we do not want to wait until there is a deficit before acting. It is absolutely necessary that the confidence of the people in the financial soundness of the government shall be maintained at a time like this."

Mr. Underwood said that, while the treasury surplus might be sufficient to cover the falling off in customs, it would take Europe a long time to re-

Corn to Ship From
This Country This Year,
Says Sec. Houston

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The effect of the war upon agriculture in the United States was discussed today for the first time by Secretary Houston, who pointed out that the United States was practically the only large food producing country undisturbed.

"If Germany and Austria cannot control the high seas," he said, "it would be very difficult for food supplies from this country to reach them. This would not have a very serious effect on our exports because a very small proportion is taken by those countries. Of the wheat and wheat flour exported in 1913, about 140,000,000 bushels, only 12,000,000 went to Germany and Austria. If they were to control the high seas it would seriously interfere with the marketing of the greater part of foodstuffs we export."

Not Much Corn to Ship

Secretary Houston pointed out that cotton, corn, wheat and meat products constituted the largest proportion of agricultural exports. He said that his department's statistics of production and exports of corn showed a decrease of over 800,000,000 bushels in 1912 from 1911 and added: "It does not seem to me likely that we are going to have a very large amount of corn to export."

Importation of corn the past year exceeded exports by nearly 2,000,000 bushels and with the crop for the present year 600,000,000 bushels less than that of 1911, Mr. Houston thinks it probable that this country could consume it all without much reduction in price, if any. The demand from abroad for corn for food is expected to help maintain the present prices.

European Crops Poor

"This season," said the secretary, "has been unfavorable for crops in Europe as a result of which there undoubtedly is some shortage; now estimated at approximately 300,000,000 bushels. This shortage may be further increased by destruction of the crops or failure to harvest them through the diversion of laborers into the army. All these factors will tend to increase the demand abroad for American wheat and strengthen prices. If there is an increased foreign demand for wheat we can certainly supply it, but can they get it?"

"Omitting the ships plying to the orient and to the north, and taking into account only the ships that clear for Europe," (Continued on Page Two.)

U. S. TO SEND ARMY TRANSPORTS AFTER AMERICANS ABROAD

Stay Away From Europe, Is Warning of Secretary of State Bryan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Five army transports and the big Panama railroad steamer Cristobal will be sent abroad to bring home stranded Americans in the war zones. These vessels, which will sail as soon as they can be made ready, will accommodate 8,000 persons; several thousand more will be taken care of by ships to be chartered by diplomats at foreign ports, and regular liners under neutral flags are expected to afford transportation within the next 30 days to about 9,000.

Secretary Garrison laid this outlook before the national relief board today and received approval of his plan to dispatch government vessels.

"Stay Away From Europe"

The five army transports to be employed—the Sumner, Kilpatrick, Denver, City of Macon and City of Memphis now are at Galveston. They were ordered tonight to Newport News, Va., to be overhauled, and outfitted for the Atlantic service.

Warnings to Americans against making "unauthorized visits" to Europe was issued today by Secretary Bryan. "All Americans who go abroad should carry American passports," said the secretary.

The state department tonight announced that passports would be issued to Americans abroad who cannot without great difficulty, danger or expense reach an American diplomatic agent, upon the receipt of a properly sworn application in their behalf by kinemen or legal representatives in the United States.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 13.—Late this afternoon a formal peace pact between the Constitutional army and the federal government was signed by General Obregon, representing the Constitutionalists, and Eduardo Iturbide, governor of the federal district. The document forms the basis under which the Constitutionalists will enter the capital.

It sets forth in general terms guarantees of the life and property of citizens of the capital and promises an absolutely peaceful occupation. The pact was drawn up at the request of the state department at Washington. General Carranza combated the idea, saying unconditional surrender was the right of his conquering army. A compromise was effected under which General Obregon signed for the Constitutionalists.

The federal forces are still occupying Cuatitlan. Tonight General Velasco, the former minister of war, issued a proclamation saying the army would be dissolved.

He said further fighting undoubtedly would bring on American intervention.

Carbajal at Vera Cruz

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 13.—The retiring provisional president of Mexico, Francisco Carbajal, arrived here this evening.

Two paths lay before him, Carbajal said, to fight or accede to the Constitutionalists. Under such conditions, the president claimed that his government could no longer exist and he concluded:

"I leave the high post which I have occupied in the belief that I have fulfilled my duty toward my country and entrusting the lives and interests in the capital to the governor of the federal district."

WILSON OPPOSES FORN LOANS

AUSTRIA AND FRANCE

Morgan & Co. Ask Officials if Flotation Is Violation of Neutrality

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—President Wilson was confronted today with the problem of whether American bankers shall be permitted to float loans in the United States for any of the countries engaged in the European war.

Although the president has not reached a final decision, he is strongly opposed to the idea. The question arose through the desire of J. P. Morgan & Co. to float a loan of several hundred million dollars for the French government. Inquiry was made of the state department by the Morgan firm as to whether the flotation of such a loan would be regarded as a violation of neutrality. Secretary Bryan discussed the subject with the president, who is studying it carefully before returning a final answer.

Austria Wants Loan

Besides J. P. Morgan & Co., it is understood that another New York banking house of prominence is desirous of floating a loan for Austria, but the state department has not yet been approached, so far as could be learned tonight, with any formal inquiry as to questions of neutrality involved.

While there is no provision in the American neutrality statutes against the loaning of money to foreign nations and no international agreement exists forbidding it as a violation of neutrality, the president's judgment is that if it were permitted, serious misunderstanding might ensue in Europe as to the real attitude of the American government and people toward the different nations in the present struggle. It is President Wilson's belief that the influence of the American government ought to be exerted so far as possible toward reducing the length of the strife rather than adding elements for its prolongation. He is likewise opposed to the sending of large quantities of gold from the United States at a time when American financial needs are par-

GERMAN CRUISER IS FORCED TO FLEE AFTER HALF-HOUR BATTLE WITH LITTLE BRITISH WARSHIP

Vessels in Running Engagement in Mid-ocean;
Speed Saves Kaiser's Ship, According to English Captain's Version of Fight

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 13.—For half an hour last Thursday night, H. M. S. Bristol, the smallest British warship in the north Atlantic, fought a long range duel with the Karlsruhe, the largest and fastest of the German cruisers, which have been trying to intercept British shipping in the Atlantic.

Fleeing from the British cruiser Suffolk, which interrupted the Karlsruhe coaling at sea from the North German-Lloyd steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm, the German cruiser was intercepted by the Bristol southwest of Bermuda, and for half an hour a long range running fight took place in the blackness of semitropical night.

Racing through the heavy swell at a terrific clip, the ships exchanged broadsides without inflicting much damage, conditions being very unfavorable for accurate gunnery. Although the British commander was at least 100 miles ahead, the German ship would not stand and fight, according to the British participants. Altering her course, she gradually drew away from the Bristol, owing to superior speed and after half an hour was out of range of the British ship's six-inch bow chaser.

"Chase Continued."

The chase was continued but somewhere in the darkness the German cruiser doubled and made off south to San Juan, where she put in for coal some days ago.

Details of this action, the first single ship fight in which a British man-of-war has engaged in these waters in a hundred years, were brought to Halifax today by H. M. S. Suffolk, the flagship of Rear Admiral Cradock, commanding the Fourth cruiser squadron. "We were steaming north on Thursday morning, last, and the crew had just been ordered to general stations, when from the forecast head came the hail, 'Enemy on the port bow,'" said the flag captain of the Suffolk in giving out an official statement of the chase of the Karlsruhe today. "As soon as we knew that war was declared the ship had been prepared for battle. Pile-tanks, all woodwork and everything else that might be at all inflammable was pitched overboard and the sea for miles around was strewn with debris."

"Under these circumstances there was very little left to do when the order 'Clear the ship for action' was given. The gun crews went to battle stations and the stokers were doubled."

"Off the port bow, about 11 or 12 miles away, we could see the Karlsruhe and the Kronprinz Wilhelm. The Karlsruhe had her bows out, coaling from the North German-Lloyd ship and as we hurried down toward her it was in the hope she had run so short in her bunkers that we could catch her."

"As soon as the Germans sighted us they took to their heels. The Karlsruhe did not even stop to pick up her bows. Her men clambered aboard as best they could and she hustled away to the northward, while the Kronprinz Wilhelm steamed off to the east. We knew of course that the Karlsruhe had the heels of us. Our hope was that she was short of fuel and could not keep up her steam, but this hope was fruitless."

"Race Lasts All Afternoon."

"Nineteen thousand yards was the closest we got to our quarry. The Bristol was to the north of us and the Karlsruhe to the south. We called both of them by wireless and ordered them to stand in the chase. The Karlsruhe tried to cut off the Kronprinz Wilhelm while the Bristol took a position to intercept the Karlsruhe. All afternoon we raced (Continued on Page Two.)

Critically Ill

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The engagement of Miss Cornelia E. Byrge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd S. Byrge of this city, was announced this afternoon. The wedding will take place next Saturday morning at Roslyn, L. I., the country home of the bride's parents.

The wedding was not to have taken place until the late fall, after the conclusion of Mr. Pinchot's campaign for the United States senatorship in Pennsylvania, but, because of the critical illness of Mr. Pinchot's mother, and her desire to have the wedding take place at once, the date was advanced. Mr. Pinchot will take his bride to his mother's residence in Saugutuck, Conn. Lloyd S. Byrge, father of the bride-elect, was minister to Holland during the administration of President Taft.

FUTURE OF EUROPE HANGS ON IMPENDING BATTLE BETWEEN GERMAN AND ALLIED ARMIES

Two Great Battle Lines Have Been Drawn

lieved to Be Only Few Hours Off

DUTCH FLOOD HOLLAND TO KEEP OUT INVADING GERMAN FORCES

Italy Mobilizes Army of 250,000 on Swiss and Austrian Border; Austrians Invade
Russian Poland and the Russians Capture
Town of Sokal in Galicia by Assault

That a great battle is impending between the Germans and the British, French and Belgian allies is the news that comes out of London. For days these opposing nations have been bringing up their forces, which now stretch in two long lines in northern Belgium and on the French frontier.

That the advance guards are in contact is evidenced by the reports of serious engagements at various places, perhaps the most important at Haelen. Earl Kitchener, the British secretary of state for war, has warned the British press against the publication of news other than official relating to naval and military movements, infringement of which order will mean suspension.

ITALY MOBILIZES 250,000 MEN

Italy is reported to have mobilized about 250,000 troops on the Swiss and Austrian frontiers as a precautionary measure. All the passes over the Alps are strongly held. At the same time the Italian foreign office has summoned home for a conference on the war situation its ambassadors at Paris, St. Petersburg, London and Berlin.

The government of Holland has officially given the French government renewed assurances of neutrality and its intention to make this neutrality respected. Sixty thousand Dutch troops are on the line of the frontier and large areas of land have been flooded.

WOUNDED ARRIVE IN ENGLAND

A number of wounded troops have arrived at Southampton from Belgium, and although their nationality has not been made known it is supposed that they are British.

The Austrian troops have entered Russian Poland, where German troops also have been engaged, and Russian forces have captured the Austrian town of Sokal in Galicia by assault. The American ambassador will take over the Austrian embassy in London, the Austrian ambassador having departed.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—The official declaration of war by France on Austria-Hungary was made public here today.

HOOR FOR GREAT EUROPEAN BATTLE IS DRAWING NEAR

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The hour of the great battle, which will have much to do with settling the future of Europe, is appreciably nearer.

Reports of engagements which, when the main armies meet, will be considered insignificant, have been coming in all day, showing that the cavalry forces, sometimes accompanied by infantry, whose duty it is to find out what is going on behind, have come into contact in northern Belgium near Haelen, and on the French frontier near Othain.

The meeting of these reconnoitering parties in force has resulted in some pretty severe fighting, in which, according to the French and Belgian official accounts, the allies scored their successes.

Other Side of Story Lacking.

The other side of the story is still to be told, for Berlin remains silent. In fact, the German War office has had little to say since it reported the capture of the city of Liege. The position around that fortress is veiled in something of a mystery. The Germans have resumed their attacks on the forts, but how they are progressing has not been communicated to the outside world.

Brussels has a report tonight that the forts had succeeded in silencing all the big German guns, but little credence is placed in this. It may be that, for the moment, the invaders have stopped their onslaught, either to rest or to adopt some new means of gaining their object.

Lorraine, for the present, seems to have been left out of the fighting, while Alsace, like western France, is the scene of engagements between the advance guards of the main German and French armies.

BELGIANS INFLICT SERIOUS DEFEAT ON THE GERMANS

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The Germans engaged in the battle of Haelen, according to late details to the Exchange Telegraph company from Brussels, numbered more than 10,000, composed of cavalry, artillery and a small force of infantry. The Belgian forces numbered about 7,000.

"It is believed," says the dispatch, "that the object of the Germans was to take a position north of the St. Trond road at Tirlemont, from which they would be able to execute a turning movement against the Belgian army."

Through efficient cavalry reconnaissance, the Belgian commander obtained accurate information of the movement of the working force. To reach Haelen the Germans had to cross the river as Haelen and it was before this place that the Belgians took up their principal position, erecting barbed wire, building entrenchments and placing guns where they could be most effectively employed.

Belgian Force Deadly

"The Germans came into sight about 11 o'clock in the morning and soon after that the artillery on both sides came into action. The German force had little effect. The Belgian force was deadly, even at a range of 2,000 meters, and played havoc with the German ranks, which were not able to stand the attack."

"The Belgians, however, are actually charged, but owing to the information of the country, which is intersected with hedges and ditches, could attack only in small groups. The Germans again and again hurled themselves at the barbed wire and tried to shoot down the Belgians by the deadly Belgian fire."

"The attack on the bridges spanning the river was equally fierce. German officers could be seen urging their men (Continued on Page Two.)

COUNTRY IS 'NUITY' ON INVESTIGATIONS, SAYS LUMBER DEALER

Jeetle Ito, Hearing Again
Disturbed by I. W. W.,
Who Cheer Witness

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13.—A crowd of industrial workers of the world enthusiastic over favorable comment on their organization again interrupted the hearing of the federal industrial relations committee today by cheering, applauding, stamping their feet and pounding the floor with umbrellas. The testimony of J. V. Patterson, a Seattle ship builder and bitter foe of organized labor but not an I. W. W. caused the demonstration. He had finished telling how coming from England as a friend of union labor, he had been forced by labor leaders in this country into an opposite attitude. He was asked his views on the I. W. W. "The contrast between the I. W. W. and unions is tremendous," he said. "The I. W. W. has something about a sordid, rotten existence. Its doctrine is a nearer to Almsight God than any political propaganda that I know of."

Officials Afraid of Unions.
Mr. Patterson declared that many Seattle officials were afraid of the political power of unions.
"Will you name one?" was asked.
"The mayor," he retorted.
Among his workers he declared are many men who have left unions. He

DR. LIEBKNECHT SHOT FOR REFUSAL TO JOIN THE ARMY, IS REPORT

Noted German Socialist Is Martyr to Conscience, Says Labor Paper

LONDON, Aug. 14 (Friday).—The Daily Citizen, organ of the labor party, says it has learned from reliable authority that Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the German Socialist leader, has been shot for refusing military service.

The Daily Citizen says that the story was brought to London by a German refugee who reported that Berlin, owing to the shortage of food, was in a virtual state of revolution.

Dr. Liebknecht was an officer of the reserves and was called up for service. He refused to respond on conscientious grounds, whereupon, according to the story, a detachment of soldiers was sent to his residence. He was taken to the military barracks and court-martialed. After a short trial he was convicted and shot by a platoon of infantry.

It is also reported that Rosa Luxemburg, the noted Socialist writer who declared soldiers were maltrated in the army, has been shot.

GERMANS KILLED FRENCH BEFORE THE WAR WAS DECLARED

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Today's sports devote much space to a statement sworn to on August 1 before a Paris committee of police by a young Frenchman Jean Gaudet, a Demombynes, aged 16, regarding murders of Frenchmen by German soldiers witnessed by him on the frontier on August 2, when he was traveling home to his family before the war began.

The Marin gives three of the first columns of its front page to this story, including an editorial article, denouncing the assassinations in the strongest terms, all under the heading: "An Empire of Barbarians."

Demombynes says he and about 50 other Frenchmen were arrested at Louviers, a frontier town on August 1 at 5 p. m. They were marched to the police station searched there and the insults of the populace and marched back to the railway.

When they arrived there a French commercial traveler, whose name was not known to Demombynes, ordered Viva la France. He was immediately seized and held against the wall of the station restaurant and shot dead.

Many among the Frenchmen shouted: "This was an act of assassination, the most heinous being those of Demombynes and his companions." They were also seized and hidden roughly to shut their mouths. When attempting to protest they were placed against the wall.

Two rows of soldiers were drawn up on each side while a group of other soldiers faced them at a distance of 10 yards. The order "Fire" was given. A volley followed and the prisoners fell.

Blain Without Orders.
New tumult broke out among the women weeping hysterically. An other of my countrymen, a tall man with a great black beard, cried: "Cowards! Assassins! The soldiers seized him without orders and thrust him against the wall. Then one putting his rifle against the man's stomach fired."

"I heard other shots, but closed my eyes. I was unable to hear more. The soldiers were placed on a train still guarded by soldiers. They arrived at Immingden on August 2 at 4 p. m. and finally got to the French frontier. Demombynes who also says he was told that two young Italians were shot on the train between Immingden and Waldshut on a trifling pretext. He is the son of a professor of the School of Eastern Languages. He lives at 9 Rue Joseph Barré, just opposite the American Art club in the Latin quarter."

SEEK NATURALIZATION TO EVADE BATTLE CALL

Aliens, However, Cannot Be Taken to Their Own Country Unless They Are Kidnaped

Although applications to the district court for naturalization are always few in number, as compared with those made to courts in larger cities, even in this country the European war has had its effect in increasing the number of those who are anxious to become citizens of the United States. The increase here in the number of first papers taken out has been slight but it has been noticeable during the last three weeks and court officials attribute it to the fact that the man of alien birth does not wish to be taken away from the ties which they have established in this country to undergo military service in Europe.

The query: "Can they take us back now?" is heard frequently and court officials believe it is present in the minds of many who have taken out their first papers but who have not secured the final papers which make them citizens of the United States.

"Can't Be Taken Back."
In the opinion of naturalization experts, however, no alien who is a reg-dent of the United States can be taken back against his will for military service, even though he has not taken out final papers. The statement which the naturalization experts have prepared in regard to the question reads:

"Neither first papers nor final papers are necessary for a man of foreign birth who seeks to escape compulsory military service in his native lands. The constitution of the United States with its personal liberty provision is not a bar."
But all men who have taken out first or final citizenship papers nullify them by leaving the country to fight under another flag. That was the result in the case of many Greeks who left America to fight in the recent war involving their country.

After such service the naturalization process must take its course as before. In regard to military service, the man with first papers is in no way a citizen but there is no way in which a man can be forced to return to his native land for such service.

Must Be Kidnaped.
Under the constitution the unwilling man would have to be kidnaped. A man guilty of a criminal act, even as a felon may be deported but no other.

"As a matter of fact citizenship in this country does not exempt a foreign-born man from military service that he might have escaped. There are many cases where American citizens are caught in their native land and forced to serve."

The United States has no treaties with these countries of compulsory military service and consequently the citizenship does not protect them in such instances.

PARIS, via London, Aug. 13.—Ordinary traffic on the greater part of the French railways with the exception of the eastern lines will be resumed soon, it is announced. It is claimed in a semi-official statement that the French railway has proven far superior to that of the Germans. The latter's heavy shells show little effectiveness, it is said.

What the Press Agents Say

"OUR MUTUAL GIRL"
At the Empress today, number 20 of "Our Mutual Girl" will be shown. You were promised a sensation with the advent of Irvin G. Cobb, foremost humorist of his time, as writer of "Our Mutual Girl" scenarios. And, next to promising pleasing surprises, there is nothing quite equal to keeping the promise. In fact, keeping the promise is even better than making it. And we have done both. For in reel 20 Irvin Cobb takes up the narrative and takes it up in his usual masterly style.
For the first time in the history of motion pictures in fact, it creates a precedent in police annals, and is making police headquarters in every city of the United States do some thinking. This splendid animal, once the prize of the Berlin police authorities, is trained to think instead of to catch thieves, just to supply a sensational episode in chapter 20.
It is Margaret's eighteenth birthday anniversary, and her aunt goes to Tiffany's for a costly cameo necklace as a birthday present for her charming niece. She is followed by the thief who owns the trained dog. Some hours after she has given Margaret the present, the thief goes back to Mrs. Kinkerböcker's house, engages the butler in conversation at the door, and allows the police dog to sneak into the house.
Anni, the dog, has been trained to follow a person through the odor of personal belongings, and one of Margaret's handkerchiefs, snuffed by the intelligent animal, is sufficient to take it to her boudoir. There it hides, awaiting her return.
Margaret, after a busy and fatiguing day, consequent upon having so many friends call, goes to bed with the precious cameo necklace in its satin case clasped in her slender hands. Hardly has she sunk into slumber than a low whistle outside the house arouses Anni. She goes to the window, and hears words from her master, and Anni takes into her delicate jaws without awakening the sleeper, the satin case.
Then Anni jumps out of the window, takes the box to her master, waiting nearby on Fifth Avenue, and he, having put the cameo in his pocket, throws the case into the gutter. It happens that Kid Joseph is nearby, and he gets a glimpse of this man, but only a glimpse. In every outward sign it is Howard Dunbar, the Man of Mystery, and as Kid Joseph is hostile to Dunbar, his hostility intensifies his certainty that it is Dunbar.
In addition to the above, there is a two-reel Broncho feature entitled "Shorty and the Fortune Teller." Also a two-reel American feature entitled, "The Trap."

Committee to Film Entire Line of March

A unique automobile parade of visiting cars will form one of the principal features of the Day of Carnival, August 27. The parade will be held in the morning, and there will be prizes for the city and state showing the largest number of cars. Already much interest is being shown in the plan, and the rivalry among visitors from Oklahoma and Texas is keen. Tulsa, Okla., citizens have put in a claim for having the greatest number of cars and the greatest representation per capita of any section in the country. Other Oklahoma towns and Texas cities are planning to make as big a showing as possible.
The cars will not be decorated, but will bear banners to show the state and city represented. There will be divisions for each state, and plans are being made to get in touch with the committees of the various state and city organizations in the region.
Moving pictures will be made of the entire parade. These will be exhibited locally first and then sent to all the cities represented in the parade.
Plans are now being made for the entertainment features of the afternoon. The masquerade ball, the crowning feature of the day, will be held in the evening from 8 o'clock until midnight. Street masking will be permitted between the hours of 8 and 8. A contract was signed yesterday by the committee for the Midland band to furnish the music for the ball. Tickets for the ball were placed on sale yesterday at the drug stores, and box seats are on sale at the Giddings & Kirkwood store.

The committee in charge of the ball will not permit any gambling devices or concessions of any kind, either on the streets or within the enclosure for dancing.
The prizes to be given at the ball are as follows:
Party case by Giddings & Kirkwood.
Fancy paragon, by Wilbur Sult company.
Six pairs of silk stockings by Kaufmann's.
Three pairs of 16-button silk gloves (white or black) by Colorado Springs Dry Goods company.
Imported cigarette box, by Hamilton Jewelry company.
Four-piece smoking set, bronze with sterling silver trimmings, by C. F. Arularius and company.
Pair of military brushes, by Paris World Drug company.
Prizes will be given for the following:
Finest costume for lady and gentleman.
Best comical costume for lady and gentleman.
Best dancer, lady and gentleman.
Most unique costume, lady or gentleman.

What the Press Agents Say

"OUR MUTUAL GIRL"
At the Empress today, number 20 of "Our Mutual Girl" will be shown. You were promised a sensation with the advent of Irvin G. Cobb, foremost humorist of his time, as writer of "Our Mutual Girl" scenarios. And, next to promising pleasing surprises, there is nothing quite equal to keeping the promise. In fact, keeping the promise is even better than making it. And we have done both. For in reel 20 Irvin Cobb takes up the narrative and takes it up in his usual masterly style.
For the first time in the history of motion pictures in fact, it creates a precedent in police annals, and is making police headquarters in every city of the United States do some thinking. This splendid animal, once the prize of the Berlin police authorities, is trained to think instead of to catch thieves, just to supply a sensational episode in chapter 20.
It is Margaret's eighteenth birthday anniversary, and her aunt goes to Tiffany's for a costly cameo necklace as a birthday present for her charming niece. She is followed by the thief who owns the trained dog. Some hours after she has given Margaret the present, the thief goes back to Mrs. Kinkerböcker's house, engages the butler in conversation at the door, and allows the police dog to sneak into the house.
Anni, the dog, has been trained to follow a person through the odor of personal belongings, and one of Margaret's handkerchiefs, snuffed by the intelligent animal, is sufficient to take it to her boudoir. There it hides, awaiting her return.
Margaret, after a busy and fatiguing day, consequent upon having so many friends call, goes to bed with the precious cameo necklace in its satin case clasped in her slender hands. Hardly has she sunk into slumber than a low whistle outside the house arouses Anni. She goes to the window, and hears words from her master, and Anni takes into her delicate jaws without awakening the sleeper, the satin case.
Then Anni jumps out of the window, takes the box to her master, waiting nearby on Fifth Avenue, and he, having put the cameo in his pocket, throws the case into the gutter. It happens that Kid Joseph is nearby, and he gets a glimpse of this man, but only a glimpse. In every outward sign it is Howard Dunbar, the Man of Mystery, and as Kid Joseph is hostile to Dunbar, his hostility intensifies his certainty that it is Dunbar.
In addition to the above, there is a two-reel Broncho feature entitled "Shorty and the Fortune Teller." Also a two-reel American feature entitled, "The Trap."

How Bismarck Saved France From a Second German Invasion

From the Kansas City Star.

How Germany planned to strike France a second time in 1870, only four years after crushing her in the war of 1870-71, and how that plan was frustrated by Prince Bismarck himself, saving partly from motives of higher statesmanship and partly from personal antagonism to Count von Moltke, the leader of the military party, and his rival for the ear of the emperor, is a chapter of Franco-German relations that greatly illuminates the background of the history that is making in Europe today.

Bismarck is properly regarded as the founder of the German empire and the chief figure in the game of war and statescraft that laid France at the feet of Prussia, but it is not so generally known that the great chancellor spoke the voice of a minority in the councils of the emperor when it came to fixing the terms of peace with Prussia. Flushed with victory, Moltke and the war party were for reducing France to the last extremity and stripping her until she should be in a state of helplessness for generations. Bismarck opposed this course and even held out against the taking of Alsace and Lorraine. He lost, but within four years when the war party won the emperor over to a plan of almost unbelievable treachery for striking France anew and extorting another huge indemnity of $2,000,000,000, the chancellor, by a piece of Machiavellian double dealing completely frustrated it and saved France and Europe from what probably would have been a general continental war.

Bismarck's Higher Statesmanship.

The history of what has been called the French state of 1873 has been detailed by M. de Bismarck in his memoirs. It was this famous correspondent in Paris of the London Times who was selected by Bismarck as the medium through which to accomplish his purpose of exposing the war plot and thereby circumventing it. In another connection, in the same book, De Bismarck has set down a remarkable statement made to him by Bismarck, which shows the quality of the great chancellor's statesmanship. Referring to his refusal to take territory from Austria in 1866, the prince said:

"When an enemy is vanquished and one has one's foot on his neck, he can be made to give whatever one wants, but one must think of the consequences of the victory as well as the consequences of the defeat. We should not be where we are now if I had taken territory from Austria. At that time everyone was against me. I had said when we started: If we should be victorious I shall not annex any Austrian territory, for we must not remain enemies forever. In 10 or 12 years' time we must be able to come to an understanding with her. When we were victorious everyone wanted me to take territory from her. I held my own, though, and since then I have often had cause to congratulate myself that I did so. In 1871 I acted in the same way. At that time France was in our hands. Paris was conquered, the commune was brewing, everything was disorganized, and if I had acted like Ignatieff, I should have demanded Picardy and Champagne. And even with regard to Metz I hesitated. But I was obliged to listen to Moltke, who kept repeating to me every hour of the day: 'Metz is in our hands or in the hands of the French within a difference of 100,000 men in the army.' Such were Prince Bismarck's views on the peace of Frankfurt, but nobody outside of the emperor's councils was aware of them at the time. Four years later, when another crisis arose for France, he held the same views, but instead of trying to urge them on the emperor and Moltke, which he knew would be fruitless, he adopted subtler methods and won.

The Plot for a Second Invasion.

At that time France, still fearful of German aggression, had created what was known as the Fourth battalion, adding greatly to the strength of the army. The German war party instantly became active, representing to the emperor that this move by France could only mean that she was preparing to avenge her defeat, and advising him to strike at once. The plan they laid before the emperor was staggering in its boldness. It was for the instant the throwing of an immense army into France, the capture of Paris and its occupation until Germany's terms of peace should be accepted. Those terms would subject France to utter helplessness for many years. Her army was to be reduced and she was to pay Germany $2,000,000,000 in 20 annual payments, with interest at 5 per cent. For 20 years, or until the last centime was paid, Germany was to keep garrisons in all the principal French cities.

The argument made to the emperor by Moltke for this astounding proposal was this:

"It is not peace we have with France, but only a truce. Today France is without an army and without money. In spite of all her inexhaustible popularity, she could not possibly raise the sums necessary to organize a resistance worthy of the game. A new war is only a question of time, and if we postpone it for 18 months, and if we possess the resources she has at her disposal, will have an far recovered from her disaster as to be able to set against us an army equal to our own. Her frontiers will have been reestablished, and she will have as strong an artillery as we have today. It is a matter whether we wish to sacrifice or not 100,000 men, for that is what will be inevitable if we put matters off. From every point of view—military, political, philocephic, and even Christian—an immediate war is a necessity."

The emperor was won over and war was determined upon.

Diplomacy's Secret Hand.

But Bismarck, although his hand was not revealed until De Bismarck's memoirs disclosed 20 years later, was quietly at work. A word in the ear of a secret agent who caused it to be conveyed to the Duc Decazes, the French minister of foreign affairs, and the countermeasures which should be taken by the German war party into the air was ready to be laid. Decazes sent for De Bismarck and revealed to him the details of the war plot. The French minister agreed with Bismarck that there was but one way of defeating it, and that was to publish the facts to the world authoritatively. This sensational means would force Alexander II, the emperor of Russia, to take a stand which it could not be hoped he would do if the information was conveyed to him privately. The czar was on the eve of a visit to Berlin and it was desired to time the publication so that he could not disclaim knowledge of Germany's intentions when he arrived there.

De Bismarck agreed to send the story to the Times if the French minister would show him in confidence the documents upon which the extraordinary story of Germany's intentions was based. Decazes agreed, and De Bismarck was able to inform John Deane, the Times publisher, of the complete authenticity of his facts.

The sensational story appeared in the Times May 4, 1873, under the title "The French Secret," and it accomplished everything its authors had hoped for.

Forced Germany to Back Up.

"The effect," says M. de Bismarck in his memoirs, "was instantaneous and decisive. Alexander II no longer had any excuse for not knowing all about the matter, and, indeed, in the midst of the excitement aroused by my letter, the German chancellor himself had nothing left to do but to bring before the Russian emperor the question of this hellish scheme imputed to Germany, and to wash his hands of it."

Thus was France saved from a second German invasion by the man she had regarded as her most implacable foe. By reason of the iron chancellor's effective, if devious diplomacy, the German military party which demanded another march on Paris in 1873 has had to wait 40 years before undertaking it, and must undertake it now under very different conditions and without any hope of collecting Moltke's little indemnity of $2,000,000,000.

U. S. AFTER SOUTH AMERICAN COMMERCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—To maintain and extend the export trade of the United States in South America, the department of commerce is about to establish a permanent and traveling force there. Four of the commercial attaches for which provision was made in recent legislation will be assigned to Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Ayres, Santiago and Lima and it is hoped to have them at their posts by October 1. In addition, six traveling commercial agents will be sent to South America to cover all the commercial areas of that continent.

Which Is Right?

From the New York Times.

In the absence from Washington of the German ambassador, the charge d'affaires, Mr. H. von Hatzfeldt, has given Mr. H. von Hatzfeldt, the German ambassador, the statement of the German government and British negotiations at London preceding Germany's attack upon Belgium that warrants attention. It differs from the statements on this subject presented on August 1 to the imperial parliament at Berlin by the German chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and on August 3 to the house of commons by Sir Edward Grey, British secretary of state for foreign affairs. Having that it is erroneous to assume that the English declaration of war was exclusively caused by Germany's invading Belgium, Mr. Hatzfeldt gives this version of the negotiations:

During these negotiations Sir Edward Grey promised that England would remain neutral only under the following conditions:

First—Germany is not allowed to commit any act of hostility against the French coast in the North sea.

Second—German troops are not allowed to pass through Belgian territory.

Third—The German navy is not allowed to attack Russia from the Baltic sea.

To the question put by the German government, whether Great Britain would undertake to respect Belgian neutrality during the whole war, no answer was given.

Sir Edward tried to impose conditions which would have secured to Great Britain without giving any risks, all the benefits which it could have obtained only by a successful naval war.

The acceptance of these conditions would have led to the bottling up of the whole German fleet, forcing it to absolute inactivity.

Knowing, on the other hand, that a great number of French officers had crossed the Belgian frontier in about 50 motor cars, pushing on to Liège, which was a frequent violation of Belgian neutrality, knowing, further, that Antwerp was ready to open its important harbor to the British fleet and landing corps, Germany was reluctantly compelled to refuse compliance with the British conditions.

How seriously at variance this is with the mutually agreeing declarations of Sir Edward and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg may be discerned at a glance.

Von Bethmann-Hollweg.

As far as England is concerned, the declaration which Sir Edward Grey made in the house of commons has cleared up the standpoint of the English government. We have made a declaration to the English government that so long as England remains neutral our navy will not attack the coast of France.

It is not a question of time, and if we postpone it for 18 months, and if we possess the resources she has at her disposal, will have an far recovered from her disaster as to be able to set against us an army equal to our own. Her frontiers will have been reestablished, and she will have as strong an artillery as we have today. It is a matter whether we wish to sacrifice or not 100,000 men, for that is what will be inevitable if we put matters off. From every point of view—military, political, philocephic, and even Christian—an immediate war is a necessity."

MINING INDUSTRY IN SOUTHWEST INJURED

EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 13.—Further paralysis of the mining industry in the southwest and Mexico has been threatened by the European wars. The copper industry is said virtually to have been killed on account of the extensive consumption of the crude metal in Europe.

Now the gold mining industry is threatened. This is disconcerting men here and there to the shortage of potassium cyanide which is a necessary element in the extraction of gold. Practically the entire supply of this material comes from Germany where large deposits are located.

It is feared if the turmoil in the old world continues for many months that all gold producing plants in America would be hampered seriously. The Mexican civil war has hindered to a large degree the operating of mines in the southern republic, and the smelting industry of Mexican ores in the United States.

upon that body voted for war. It was as though in a similar crisis, the President of the United States delivered a message to Congress and asked it to decide the issue of war or peace. Nobody doubts that the House of Commons truly represents the English people, or that in this instance especially its action was an expression of their will.

In France, too, no action looking to war could be taken without first consulting the Parliament. Even the mobilization order could not be issued without a vote of that body.

These distinctions are interesting and important, for they outline the fundamental issues of the war. The ultimate triumph of the Triple, or more correctly, the Dual Alliance, would be the triumph of a system of military autocracy the effect of which is to make of Europe an armed camp even in times of peace.

IKKY, THE CHAMELEON

THE TELEGRAPH imparts to its readers the important information that Ikky Stevens of Denver was in town yesterday, and that he confided to it this weighty message to the people: "The only channel through which the people of Colorado can hope for safe, efficient, and economical government is through the Republican party."

We might have more confidence in the Hon. Ikky's opinions as to the merits of the respective parties if he would stay in some one of them long enough to get acquainted with it. True, he knows something of each, for he has been flip-flopping about from one to another for the last thirty years. He began his political career as a Republican, but in 1894 flopped to the Populists and hired a hall in Denver to deliver a speech in favor of "Bloody Bridges." Waite. Two years later he flopped again, this time, to the National Silver Republican party, which rewarded him with the job of treasurer of its national committee.

After the demise of that organization he wriggled back into the regular Republican party and became a perennial candidate for senator or something else, until two years ago when he announced his conversion to the Progressive cause. But when that organization gently but firmly refused to give him a job the virus of discontent entered his soul once more and he helped launch the "Progressive Party League," a neither-hay-nor-grass political organization which was born only to die. About that time the Republican State Committee issued an official announcement that Progressives who returned to the fold would be given "due consideration" on the Republican ticket. Nuff said. Ikky forthwith executed one of his lightning leaps and became a Republican, and was rewarded with an assembly designation for a place on the senatorial ticket.

Thus far he has been a Populist, a Silver Republican, a Progressive, and on three separate occasions a Republican. Being still in the prime of life there is yet time for him to serve as a Democrat, a Prohibitionist and a Socialist.

THE MASQUE BALL.

To the Editor of The Gazette:
I want to express my surprise at the position you have taken in regard to the masque ball. The forepart of the season you quoted lots of scripture and gave us a number of sermons which we enjoyed, but now to see you on the other side it causes questions to arise in our minds. As to the standing of the ball, I heard men who shade no pretension at religion or even morality, describing them in the strongest, degrading and immoral terms. They were not condemning them in any way, but just described them as they looked to them. Now, if these godless fellows had such an opinion of them (that could not be published), how must they look to one with higher ideals? If the masque were only to conceal a person's identity and cause a little merriment, as with children, I could not see the harm in it; but to one who knows more about them, knows that this is not by any means all that is concealed, for persons of low morals use this as a means to accomplish their purpose in various ways before they are unmasked.

FROM OTHER PERSPECTIVES

BRYAN'S CANCELED DATES
From the Philadelphia Inquirer.
Thoughtless persons who have been resting under the illusion that the war in Europe would in no way affect the government of the United States have already discovered their mistake. A dispatch from Washington brings the disappointing information that because of the "acute situation among the European nations" Secretary Bryan on Sunday was compelled to cancel his engagements to speak before certain Chautauque associations in Connecticut. As Mr. Bryan has frequently spoken under these tents in 34 hours, it can readily be figured that his financial loss by reason of the forced cancellation of his dates is not less than $750 for last Sunday alone.

This is a pretty serious business when we consider the high cost of living and the fact that the secretary of state must resort to all sorts of expedients in order to live within the pliancy of $12,000 a year which is given to him by an ungrateful government.

It is no secret that Mr. Bryan had a pretty thorough understanding with President Wilson before he consented to take the state portfolio. He reserved the right to continue his lecture tour.

But there was one serious omission in the understanding between the president and the gifted orator of the state department. There should have been some provision made for unexpected emergencies, like the present European war, that compel the secretary of state to remain in Washington and neglect his lecture dates.

The Business of Life

BY RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine has recently given up smoking. "Did you do it to please your wife?" he was asked.

"No," he said, "to please myself. Nobody asked me to give it up. My wife doesn't particularly object to smoking. I dropped it because I thought it was taking away from me more than it gave. I figured it out this way. Smoking keeps me a little 'below-par.' When I am below-par I am not capable of fully enjoying life. The pleasure I get from smoking is less than the pleasure I get from smoking. So what's the use of smoking? I thought it all over and decided I was cheating myself, so I gave it up."

I think that man will be a successful business man.

And I do not mean merely in the business of money getting, but in the greater business of life.

There are a great many men who are very quick to know when they are getting cheated in the business of money getting. There are comparatively few who are far-sighted enough to know when they are getting cheated in the business of life.

Any indulgence which takes away from our ability to enjoy the rest of our life ought to be carefully inspected. Does it give us as much happiness as it takes away? We should ask ourselves. Leaving out the question of morality and our duty to others and judging our indulgences by that criterion alone, you will find that many few of them pay.

Take overeating, for instance. The man who overeats gets a few minutes' pleasure at the table. That's on the credit side of the ledger. On the debit side we find a chronic inability to enjoy all the pleasures of life, including work, a vastly increased liability to disease, and in all probability pain, and the mental pain of depression that is likely to accompany indigestion.

That means that he pays for his few moments' pleasure at least a hundred times over. What kind of business is that? What would he say to any business transaction that involved such an outrageous overcharge?

And this is true not only of the common self-indulgence such as eating and smoking, but of many that are not so commonly recognized as such.

Overindulgence in work, in a habit of worry, in a bad temper—all of these may be bad harrows in the business of life.

Look over your ledger, reader-friends. Inspect your particular indulgence. See what it is written on the debit side against it. Ask yourself if it gives you as much as it takes away. In short, find out if you are cheating yourself in the business of life.

ALFRED THE GREAT

Alfred the Great was the only English king who got his nickname for being larger than his job.

Alfred was born about 850 A. D., at which time being king of England was not more pleasant or important a job than being captain of a St. Louis baseball team.

Dukes and Earls worked for hours making deerskin letters with a sputtery pen.

When being captain of a St. Louis baseball team. Previous to Alfred's time, English kings had been kept busy for many years running away from the Danes and other enemies. Kings at best in those days were an ignorant lot who ate with their fingers and could not read words of one syllable.

The climate and the general ill-nature was very hard on them and three of Alfred's brothers had become prematurely deceased on the throne at the age of 23.

Alfred's father had caused him to be taught to read and write, which made him regarded as a mollycoddle. But Alfred soon proved that a college education isn't a bad thing for a king. He at once went to work chasing the Danes out of his kingdom. It was weary work, because the English ran so fast. Finally there was none left to fight but Alfred himself. He had belonged to the gloom club while in college and now he took his harp, disguised himself and sang in the Danish camp until he learned the precise hour at which the army was drunk on pay nights. Then he headed up his poor, shivering army again and won a great victory.

Alfred chased the Danes into France and then reigned peacefully many years. He imported learning into England and made it so popular that dukes and earls stood their swords in the corner and worked for hours making deerskin letters with a sputtery pen. He revised the laws, making them less fatal for the common people, introduced justice, then a total stranger in Europe, and used as much practical common sense that England was the happiest land in Europe before he died.

Alfred died about 900 A. D., and from all reports his kingdom has not yet quite regained the place where he left it. He is called the great because he was an all-round champion king. Some kings are mighty warriors but have morals which would make a hyena blush. Other kings attend church with fervor but fight like an old woman shoeing a hen. Alfred was a great fighter and not only a good man but a scholar, a scientist and a fine politician to boot. If the laws of heredity were stronger, kingdoms and empires would be much more popular and republics would be closing out at a sacrifice.

REAL "DOGS OF WAR"

From the Washington Star.
"Dogs of war" is a phrase which once meant a thing as real as the war horse. Dogs have played their part in battles and campaigns and in the old wars between England and Scotland dogs were used by both combatants for pursuing and killing fugitives after a defeat. It is related that Wallace and Bruce each had close escapes from capture by English bloodhounds. Bruce is said to have thrown the English dog off the scent by the now well known expedient of wading up a stream for enough to bathe his trousers and Wallace, evaded the hounds by having recourse to a trick more or less common in those bloody times of killing a follower and leaving the body in the dog's path for them to come upon. The dogs finding a body believed that their task was done and discontinued to hunt.

In the history of the war of the middle ages one finds reference to the use of big dogs against cavalry for the purpose of throwing the horses into confusion and not alone for causing panic but casualties, for these fierce canine partisans were clothed in coats of mail studded with spikes and having scythes fitted to their harness.

Instances are recorded where war dogs with fire brands fastened to their coats of mail have been set on an enemy's camp with destructive results. Henry VIII must have found dogs useful in military ways, because in English history it is written that he of fended the loss of 40,000 auxiliaries in a war done to King Charles V. of Spain to aid that monarch in his war with France.

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth when the earl of Essex entered Ireland, for the purpose of suppressing insurrection there his army was accompanied by 100 bloodhounds.

W. L. D. writes: "My boy, aged 3, grinds his teeth at night dreadfully; in fact he wakes me up every night, sometimes several times. He eats only what a child of his age should eat, for supper he gets only milk or some cereal. How am I to stop the habit? I am afraid he will hurt his teeth, for he grinds them together with an awful force and can be heard in any of the adjoining rooms."

SUBSTITUTES FOR BREAD

From the Washington Star.
There are parts of the world where, for various reasons, people do not eat bread, but turn to some serviceable substitute. In certain parts of Italy and Austria and in the agricultural districts of Roumania baked loaves of bread are never seen.

Not very far from Vienna, at Obersternmark, the staple food is "stern," a sort of porridge made of ground beech-nuts. At breakfast it is taken with cream or curdled milk, at dinner with broth or dried lard and at supper with milk. This dish is substituted for bread in Carinthia and other parts of the Tyrol.

Polenta is the name of the bread substitute in northern Italy. This too is a kind of porridge, and it is made of holed grain. It is not, however, allowed to "granulate," like Scotch porridge or the Austrian stork, but is holed into a solid pudding, cut up and distributed in portions by means of a string. It is eaten both hot and cold and is in the broadest sense many an Italian's daily bread.

Managilla, the favorite food of the poorer people of Roumania, is a variation of polenta. It resembles the latter in that it is made of holed grain, but it is unlike polenta by reason of the fact that the grains are not permitted to settle into a solid mass, but are kept distinct as they are in oatmeal porridge.
